May as the Month of Mary: East and West

Roman Catholics have a deep history of honoring the Blessed Virgin Mary during the month of May. This devotion, which developed over the course of centuries in the West, spread and connected to Marian devotions indigenous to the Christian East, leading Catholics all over the world to make May a special time to praise God's Immaculate Mother.

May as the Month of Mary in the West

As early as the 13th century, Latin Catholics began designating May as a special month to honor the Blessed Virgin Mary. ...in 1284, King Alphonsus X of Spain, in one of his poems, sings of May as the month of Mary....

...the German monk Blessed Henry Suso, O.P., adopted the practice of honoring Mary in a special way during springtime. He would gather flowers, weave them into a crown, and then place it on the statue at Our Lady's altar. Similar devotions spread throughout Germany in the succeeding centuries.

By the 18th and 19th centuries, both the Society of Jesus and the Redemptorists had distributed devotional literature singling out May as a special time to honor the Queen of Heaven. Public liturgical celebrations became normative throughout Europe, eventually making their way to North America and missionary lands as far as China.

By the 20th century, devotion to Mary in May had become so beloved by Latin Catholic faithful that Pope Pius XII established the Feast of the Queenship of Mary on May 31 in his 1954 encyclical Ad caeli reginam...

May Marian Devotions Head East

Within Eastern Christendom, there is no shortage of feast days and devotions honoring the Mother of God. Although there are no universal Marian feast days listed on the Byzantine Rite Calendar, smaller Marian feast days are widespread throughout the East with towns, regions, and monasteries giving special praise to wonder working icons of the Mother of God and local Marian miracles.

With the reunification of previously separated Eastern churches with Rome over the centuries, it is not surprising to find Latin fervency for the Blessed Virgin having a marked influence on these communions.

The Syro-Malabar Catholic Church, which is based in Kerala, India, has a long history of Marian devotions... Borrowed in large part from the West, these devotions include praying the Rosary; building a special altar or designated area of prayer dedicated to Mary in the home; and consecrating oneself and one's family to the Blessed Virgin.

The Maronite Catholics of Lebanon, who never formally broke communion with Rome... have a rich tradition of honoring Mary in May that parallels those found among Latin Catholics. While Latin Catholics typically assign Saturday as a special day for Marian devotion, Maronites honor her on Wednesday, as they believe this is the day the Blessed Virgin fell asleep in the Lord.

The Chaldean Catholic Church, which uses the East Syriac Rite and is headquartered in Baghdad, Iraq, has also adopted the practice of honoring God's Mother in May. Centuries before it re-established communion with Rome, the Chaldeans decreed May 15 as the Feast of Our Lady of the Fields.

A Special Devotion Among Greek Catholics

...those Catholics following the Byzantine Rite, known as Greek Catholics, possess a strong tradition of honoring Mary. In light of their Latin brethren's special fervency during May, various Greek Catholic churches have followed suit, blending Latin praxis with their own tradition...

Regardless of geographic location, church structure, or rite, Catholics have come to embrace May as a time to pay honor to Mary, the Mother of God and Queen of Heaven. By her prayers and the prayers of all the saints, may we be protected during our time on earth and find eternal joy in the Kingdom of Heaven.
